

Wonderful experiences typical of Maharishi Sthapatya Veda home owners

Hello Mike and Meredith,

We are now on the home straight with the house so I thought it was about time that I shared the story of our wonderful journey so far. It all began, when quite by accident, we discovered 3 easterly facing blocks in Maleny and after a process of elimination we were able to purchase one of these blocks.

The support of nature began immediately. In short, when I rang the owner in Sydney, he had unexpectedly decided to sell only a couple of days prior to my call. Miraculously, an excellent carpenter turned up, so I did an owner builders course [easy] and we got started.

Whenever a challenge arose it was quickly dispatched by some of your wisdom and precise knowledge or, as my chippy would say, "the universe has looked after it." This statement is amazing because I had not told the two carpenters (serious ockers) anything about MSV, until well into the building process but they had been saying things like "isn't that a nice measurement or these numbers just feel right". When I finally gave them a copy of the MSV booklet they became quite excited and we soon had their friends turning up for a "sticky beak".

We have had lots of people doing drive-bys and the house has generated a lot of interest. One of the carpenters actually has had some major "life changing experiences" since he started and he says he is convinced it has something to do with the house. Robin was a bit of a sceptic when we started and even though it isn't finished yet, she admits that when she visits, it is very hard to leave. Just yesterday some friends arrived unexpectedly for a cuppa and they just would not go home. Many of our friends have said the same thing.

One of the best parts about building a SV house is that it's a "no brainer" ie "the kitchen goes here", the "bedrooms go there" etc etc etc. It makes building a "breeze" and in the long run I am sure I have "saved a fortune" by adopting these very practical, age old principles.

It is amazing how the house is so "user friendly". The reason I am saying this is that we have other friends who are building at the moment and they seem so confused and stressed. They seem to be "running blind". We are experiencing many "beautiful things" every day.

As you predicted Mike, Robin has resumed meditating. I'll sign off now and attach a photo of the house. Keep you posted,

Jai Guru Dev,
Keith & Robin
